A Runaway.

Mr. John Sharp, who lives five or six miles south of town, brought a load of fine melons to town today. He stopped his wagon on South Elm and hitched his horses by the reins while he went into a store. The horses became frightened and started down the street at a rapid gait.

The usual crowd gathered to witness the runaway, everybody expecting to see melons scattered right and left and anticipating a feast. It is said that Williams, of the Odell Hardware Company, stood out in the street ready to pick up a nice, large melon, should one happen his way, and it was only through the efforts of John Graham that he was prevented from dashing after the team.

A Fine Effort.

For compactness of thought, terseness of expression and scintillating logic the sermon of Dr. Sam Smith, of Columbia, S. C., at the First Presbyterian church last night was the effort of a master mind.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

Will Guthrie went to Graham this morning.

REV. F. S. STICKNEY DEAD.

A GOOD AND USEFUL MAN GONE TO HIS REWARD.

A Former Greensboro Pastor Died Saturday Morning in Richmond—Great Sorrow.

It was a great sorrow to his many friends here when it was learned Saturday evening that Rev. F. S. Stickney had died at his home in Richmond, Va., at 3:30 o'clock that morning after a brief illness of only one week.

A little over a week ago he was taken ill with what seemed to be a slight attack of cholera morbus. He soon recovered, and was able to be about the house again. Tuesday he had to again take to his bed with gastritis. Some heart trouble followed this attack, and he grew rapidly worse until death relieved him from his suffering early Saturday morning.

About four years ago Mr. Stickney was rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, in this city, for one year, and made many friends during his short stay among us. Of engaging personal address, sympathetic, quick-witted, generous, and with never failing good humor, he was a great favorite with men and women everywhere. He was a fine preacher, fluent of speech in the pulpit, and possessed great familiarity with the text of the Bible. He was a man of great breadth of view, and in no sense bigoted or intolerant where other men's religious views were concerned. For this noble trait in his character people of all denominations admired him. During his short ministry in Greensboro he did much to build up St. Andrew's church.

The late Bishop Phillips Brooks, of Massachusetts, was a good friend of Mr. Stickney, and the admiration which he had for the Bishop was unbounded.

The funeral services were held at Monumental church, Richmond, of which church he was rector, yesterday evening at 6 o'clock. The body lay in state in the church from 12 o'clock, noon, until the funeral, so as to allow the members of the congregation and friends to have a last glance at the beloved rector. At 7:30 p. m. the remains were brought to Wilson, N. C., where they were interred this morning.

Fenner Satterthwaite Stickney was born in Greensboro, Ala., thirty-seven years ago, and was the son of Col. and Mrs. Joseph B. Stickney, who moved to their fine old estate of "Woodstock," in Beaufort county, N. C., when young Stickney was two years old. He was a grandson of the late Fenner B. Satterthwaite, for whom he was named.

After he received his primary education in the schools of Beaufort county he was sent to the Episcopal High School, near Alexandria, Va. After this he attended the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn., and here his mind, which had been dwelling on the question of studying for the ministry, was made up. He completed his education at the General Theological Seminary of New York, where he was prepared for the ministry.

After his ordination he returned to North Carolina, where he was put into the mission field in the western part of the State, in which he was very successful.

He finally took charge of St. Andrew's church, this city, and met with great success while here. From here he was called to St. Peter's church, where he was in the midst of great and useful work, when he was called to Monumental church, Richmond, Va., in the autumn of 1894.

Mr. Stickney leaves a widow—a most charming and estimable lady, who was Miss Elizabeth Gaylord, of Beaufort county—and two children—Gertrude and Fenner, aged 11 and 6 years respectively.

Death at Jamestown.

Miss Centh Armfield died at her home in or near Jamestown yesterday evening, at 6 o'clock, of consumption.

Deceased was a sister of J. Lee Armfield, of Jamestown.

Died Suddenly.

Sam. Klutz, the watchman at Tate's furniture factory, High Point, died suddenly this morning. His death was caused by some heart trouble.

ANOTHER NEW INVENTION.

Pronounced by Master Mechanics the Best of its Kind.

We venture the assertion that not a dozen people in Greensboro knew that Mr. M. H. Pinnix had been working on a car coupler for years; that he had secured two patents; that he has a model constructed and on exhibition at the Banner Warehouse which shows the working perfectly and that it has points to spare over any coupler now in use. Yet such is the case.

We saw the model worked, examined it, worked it ourselves and so far as a layman may judge in the matter it is almost perfect. What is more the inventor showed the model to the master mechanics both at the Southern shops at Manchester and the Baltimore and Ohio shops in Richmond and they pronounced it superior to any coupler now in use.

The coupler is wholly automatic, no one need touch it and it never fails to lock when the cars meet. It is absolutely held fast; when the brakeman uncouples he does not go between the cars but works a lever either placed at the side or on top of the car as desired. It will work with the standard coupler or any other coupler now in use. The principle is a entirely new one but its simplicity and efficiency can not be questioned. It has the following advantages over the Janey coupler, which is the best now in use:

1. In the Janey if the drawhead pulls out from the car it falls on the track, often derailing the train; in this coupler it is carried along by the drawhead to which it is joined.

2. It never fails to lock and looks easily, doing away with the necessity of jamming the cars together.

3. No one need be present to raise the lever when coupling.

4. It is impossible for it to "freeze up," a difficulty which often necessitates heating the Janey coupler before the cars can be uncoupled.

5. The absolute safety for the man coupling since it need not be touched, and

6. It is cheaper, lighter and stronger than the Janey.

7. There is no possibility of its breaking loose on a curve.

Mr. Pinnix says he has never shown it to a man who did not pronounce it the best coupler in existence.

The model shows the working of the coupler perfectly, being two small flat cars, and it cost the inventor about seventy-five dollars to get it constructed.

SENATOR BUTLER'S SPEECH.

Mr. Butler said in his speech at Newton Saturday that he was "out speaking at this time to warn the people of the movements of the politicians." Is that not refreshing? It has been many a day since we have run upon so cool a piece of self assurance. If folks in this neck of the woods were asked to point out a politician in this State, nine out of ten would extend their index fingers Butlerward. How else does Mr. Butler account for his being in the United States Senate? Were his qualifications for that exalted place so manifest that an unanimous outburst of popular acclaim simply have him into it? Well hardly.

Mr. Butler should not despise the ladder by which he climbed. It is not good taste to deny the calling by which one's bread is earned. He became Senator by a piece of shrewd political scheming—just as most other men do in the South, where they are still too poor to "take by purchase." We do not in the least blame Mr. Butler either for the scheming or being elected. On the contrary we have always thought it rather neatly done; but when he attempts to pose as a guileless patriot; to be "like a star and dwell apart;" to constitute himself the unselfish guardian of the "poor people;" he becomes the least bit ridiculous.

The Senator started out with a great flourish of his tongue to outline the policy of his party, but, so far as we can gather, the only policy yet propounded is in the sentence where he says "he will be found in the middle of the road appealing to the people to follow him;" which, being interpreted is, the Senator will continue to do business at the old stand. He has always evinced more or less fondness for having the people follow him; it is second only to his fondness for appealing to them to do so; the latter is a passion, a mania with him. The Senator simply has a bad case of "stage-struck" and has mistaken it for the spirit of patriotism moving mightily within him. He should diagnose his ailment more carefully. He is likely to find, when he goes a strolling in the middle of the road, that a delighted public will not cast at his feet a big bouquet labelled "second time."

North Carolina will want men to represent her in future who stand on something more than the middle of the road; something a little more specific. Glittering generalities and promises impossible of performance will have very much less weight in the late, than they had in the early nineties. More-over the middle of the road is not in very good repute just now. It would be well for the Senator to sorter edge off toward one side, out of the August sun, and cease calling for awhile.

When wheat is striving to get between the dollar mark and the dot is not an auspicious time for calling anyway. Instead of enthusiastic cheers he might be rewarded with a big, chilly horse-laugh.

It is whispered that Mr. Hanna worked some of that surplus "providence" on the Ohio Populists. Marcus is nothing if not an inflator of booms. The love of his profession is so strong that he gave even Coxe a boost.

THE Andree expedition has started a great number of balloon hoaxes. The latest is the man who will take provisions to Klondyke and bring back dust by means of one. We presume it would be proper, in the slang of the day, to say that balloons "are in the air."

It was very short-sighted in Mr. Dingley not to have put a clause in his tariff bill imposing a duty on Klondyke gold. We should not allow so much of a British product to come in free—it will damage our infant mining industries.

A GOOD JOKE.

But Mr. Ennis Was Equal to the Emergency.

Mr. P. C. Ennis, of Raleigh, an old newspaper man, by the way, is located in Greensboro and is working in the interest of the A. and M. College at Raleigh.

He was down in Randolph county, near Asheboro, one day last week and learning that two prominent gentlemen would address the voters at Asheboro on the local tax question, concluded he would go over and hear them.

When he reached Asheboro he found the speakers had not arrived. Quite a crowd was present, and a freeholder thought he recognized one of the speakers in the person of Mr. Ennis.

"Pink" knows how to appreciate a joke, and when he was asked to address the waiting crowd he consented to do so, with the understanding that he be allowed to choose his subject.

Mr. Ennis says the opportunity was too good to let slip, so he improved the time by talking A. and M. College to the crowd for a whole hour.

We have not learned with what enthusiasm the address was received. We understand that Mr. Ennis tried the same game at Randleman.

In a Deplorable Condition.

There was one man in Greensboro who was not in a satisfactory frame of mind for worship yesterday, and it came about on account of a little thieving, of which so much has been done in and around Greensboro recently.

R. W. Filator, who boards at the Monroe House, on Buchanan street, went to his room late Saturday night to take a bath. When he went to the wardrobe in search of clean linen, he was surprised to find none. He knew that all the underwear he had was left in the wardrobe. After searching considerably and finding none, he came up street and bought a supply for Sunday, swearing vengeance on the thief, who had visited his apartments.

It's tough on a fellow to lose anything at the hands of a thief, but when it comes to stealing a man's wearing apparel—well, it puts an awkward feeling on a person, to say the least.

His Hands Full.

Rev. Horace Weeks Jones, the popular rector of St. Barnabas Episcopal church, had as much as one man could well attend to yesterday. At 8 o'clock in the morning he administered holy communion at St. Andrew's church, and at 10 o'clock he preached and administered holy communion at St. Barnabas. He went to Burlington on the noon train, where he preached in St. Athanasius Episcopal church last evening.

Good Work.

Sam Browne, superintendent of the street force, in addition to the other good work he has done, has recently made a great improvement on Gorrell street. The street has been cut down, graded and otherwise improved.

Gorrell promises to become one of the most desirable residence streets in the city.

Nearing Completion.

The new front to the store of the Greensboro Hardware Company is nearing completion. Contractor Smith has finished the brick work. When completed it will be an ornament to the main street of our city.

MURDERED WHILE ON DUTY.

A FLAGMAN IS KILLED AT DUNN BY A TRAMP.

The Young Man Dies Soon After he is Wounded--Bloodhounds Put in Pursuit of Murderer.

We learn of a very distressing accident which occurred at Dunn, a little town north of Fayetteville, late on Saturday afternoon.

Two tramps, a negro and a white man, were stealing a ride on a passenger train of the A. C. L. At Dunn they were discovered by the conductor, who attempted to put them off, but the tramps had no idea of getting off and showed fight. They were getting the best of the conductor, when the flagman took a hand in the scuffle.

The negro picked up a coupling pin and started to brain the flagman, and while the flagman was defending himself from the negro, the white tramp turned loose the conductor, stepped off a few paces and fired, the ball taking effect in the bowels of the flagman. Both tramps then ran off before any of the trainmen could capture them.

The wounded young man was put on the train and brought to Fayetteville. He bled profusely and died just as the train reached Fayetteville.

A pair of blood-hounds was procured as early as possible, and yesterday morning the dogs, with officers of the law, were sent to the scene of the murder. We learn that the hounds struck the trail of the fiends, but had not caught them at last accounts.

Railroad men are justly indignant over this outrage, and should the murderer be captured he might meet with summary punishment.

SUNDAY AT MUIR'S CHAPEL.

Good Attendance at the Camp Meeting--Some Fine Preaching.

As has been the custom for years, many Greensboro people went out to Muir's Chapel yesterday to attend the camp meeting. Other places were well represented, though it is said the crowd was not so large as it often is. The Biblical Institute at Guilford College kept many away.

Rev. P. J. Carroway, the venerable and beloved presiding elder, preached one of his usual fine sermons in the morning at 11 o'clock. It is said to have been a strong and forceful sermon, listened to with interest by the large congregation.

In the afternoon Rev. N. R. Richardson, of High Point, preached a sermon full of power and the Holy Ghost. Mr. Richardson is not now in the regular work of the ministry, being the colporteur agent for the Western North Carolina Conference, but he has lost none of his zeal and preached yesterday with the same fervor and effectiveness as of yore.

Presiding Elder Carroway preached again at night.

The camp meeting will continue through this week, we suppose, and many Greensboro people will doubtless attend. Several families from the city are camping on the grounds during the meeting. They are comfortably domiciled in snug log cabins erected for camping purposes.

Sorry to Lose Him.

Mr. A. B. Bray, of the firm of Bray Bros., leaf tobacco buyers and exporters, left this morning for Danville, where he will be one of the buyers for the American Tobacco Company.

Mr. Bray has resided in Greensboro about two years and has made many friends here by his quiet demeanor and gentlemanly bearing.

He is a good judge of tobacco, having a large and varied experience in the business, and will doubtless meet with success in his new field of labor. His many friends here regret to lose him from our midst, but wish for him great prosperity wherever he may cast his lot.

C. A. Bray has bought his brother's interest in the business of Bray Bros., though the firm name will remain unchanged.

SUNDAY IN THE MEADOW.

The Usual Sunday Performance--Beer Bottles in the Play.

As is usually the case, the Sabbath stillness was disturbed and the Holy Day desecrated by fights among the denizens of that section known as the "Meadows" yesterday.

The ball was started rolling early in the morning by two colored women who gave a before breakfast performance. The principal weapons used in this early morning combat were beer bottles. No serious damage was done, though the women pummeled each other over the head to their heart's content.

Late yesterday afternoon a man and a woman became engaged in a quarrel that resulted in the woman being beat and bruised up by the man.

These weekly occurrences are a disgrace to our city, and it seems to us that some means could be devised to break up these vile dens of iniquity.
